

BECOME A BUILDING CONSULTANT

Carrying out building inspections is seen by many builders as a way to capitalise on their years of experience and provide a profitable cash flow in a new market.

It is seen to have reasonably low overheads, low start up costs and “better than swinging a hammer for a living”.

The Master Builders Association and RAPID Training have developed a two day training course that provides training in the correct inspection process and the development and completion of the inspection report.

Who should attend?

- Builders who want to become a building consultant
- Builders who wish to produce building inspection reports
- Builders currently carrying out inspections who wish to better protect their business

What does the program cover?

- Different inspection types
- Processes and tools used during the inspection
- Carrying out an actual onsite inspection
- Common building faults
- Our duties within the law
- Working to a standard
- Planning and preparing the final reports*
- Wording your findings
- All documentation that supports the report

Unit of competency:

- CPCBC5013A - Develop professional technical & legal reports on building & construction projects
- BSBCMN420A - Write complex documents

How long does the course take?

- The course runs over two consecutive days
